1. The Fishery Technicians Training Institute for advanced students is on the northeast outskirts of Unggi (N 42-21, E 130-24) (FB-1589) at FB-152874. The institute, which is under the control of the North Korean Cabinet Fisheries Department¹, stands about 400 meters from the Unggi pier. It consists of a two-story cement building and a frame building.
2. The institute conducts six-month courses in mechanics, fishing, manufacturing, and navigation. Anyone who can read Korean characters and who seems reasonably suitable as a student is allowed to enter the institute upon the recommendation of the national fisheries agency nearest his home. There are no limitations on age, sex or educational background. About 70 students are allowed to enter each session, including approximately 30 women who enroll for the course in manufacturing.

25X1

1. Comment. According to other available information, the North Korean government agency in control of fisheries is called the Fisheries Ministry.
